

Record Group 12

St. Robert Bellarmine College of Liberal Arts-

Loyola in 1917 was established as a College of Arts and Sciences. The records of this group contain college publications and correspondence files of deans, department chairs, faculty and some samples of student papers. In 1935 engineering curricula was formally separated to create a College of Engineering.

In 1972, the colleges were rearranged once again when science coursework was removed and the college redesignated Liberal Arts.

Today the records of departments and programs including Afro-American Studies, Alcohol/Drug Studies, Asian and Pacific Studies, Chicano Studies, Classical Civilizations, Classics, Economics, English, European Studies, Geography, History, Humanities, Irish Studies, Latin American Studies, Liberal Studies, Los Angeles Studies, Modern Languages, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Speech Communications, Theological Studies, Urban Studies and Women's Studies are available for research.
